

Children become published authors with their Trafford Tales

Local children were given the opportunity to become published authors recently thanks to a series of creative writing courses organised by Trafford College's Employability and Community Learning Team.

The project, which ran over four weeks in partnership with Trafford primary schools, offered parents the opportunity to work with their children to produce a short story for inclusion in the publication of a book called 'Trafford Tales'.

Community Development Worker, Sandra Mclennon, and Trafford College Principal, Lesley Davies OBE, joined parents and their children at a presentation assembly at Seymour Park Community Primary School recently, where 22 parents and 28 children took part in the sessions. Children were presented with their certificates for taking part in the course and also received their very own copy of the published Trafford Tales book.
